

Conference on Problems
Wednesday Proves Pleasing to All Parties,
Mayor Sims Asserts.

DEFINITE PLAN

Hunter Street To Be Southern Terminus for Two Viaducts Under New Plan.

The greatest progress yet developed in the agitation for an amicable plan for erection of twin viaducts over railroad tracks at Central avenue and Pryor street was made at a conference late Wednesday of citizens, city officials, W. R. Cole, president of the N. C. & St. L. railroad, and other railroad officials in the offices of Reuben R. Arnold, attorney, it was announced by Mayor Walter A. Sims and Mayor Cole after the session.

All essential features of the original twin viaducts plan, involving a project estimated to cost approximately $2,000,000, were agreed upon, Mayor Sims and Mr. Cole declared, while engineers representing the railroads and the city are to collaborate at once in the new plan, which, it was declared, involved only minor modifications, chiefly engineering problems.

Within the next week the definite plan should be formally approved and which the viaducts are to be financed should be known, Mayor Sims said.

The conference was behind closed doors and those participating declined to go into full details until a definite plan is worked out.

Plans Are Outlined.

Essential features of the viaducts plan, as unanimously agreed upon at the conference, were outlined as follows:

Agreement to eliminate plan to lower railroad tracks.

Decision to recommend "double decker streets" on Wall street and on "other streets, with the view of expediting traffic."

Decision to eliminate the so-called "hunter street dip" under which plan the viaducts were to turn from Hancock street, and lead to the state "gravel"

The northern Decatur street will be the northern terminus for the two viaducts and Hunter street the southern terminus.

Rumors that the committee would endeavor to to displace the proposed Central avenue viaduct by an underground and to erect only the Pryor street viaduct were "quashed" by Mayor Sims, who stated emphatically that it was unanimously agreed to erect the two viaducts.

Mayor Is Jubilant.

"This conference was marked by the strenuous campaign to bring about the strenuous campaign to bring about erection of the viaducts," said Mayor Sims, "and all persons interested have agreed and minor modifications will be made known in their entirety as soon as the engineers complete their work.

"The plan as a general proposition, will be acceptable to the general public, the merchants, the women

The meeting Wednesday was that of a subcommittee of the viaduct commission, composed of council representatives and citizens and named Mayor Sims soon after the Georgia legislature passed the viaduct bill last summer. Those in attendance were Robert F. Addox, chairman of the subcommittee; R. R. Arnold, H. H. Dean, Dr.

EPISCOPAL WORKERS WILL MEET TONIGHT

Laymen and clergy of the Episcopal church in the diocese of Atlanta will meet in the interests of the nationwide campaign at a dinner at the Biltmore hotel at 9:30 o'clock tonight. Sam Evans, of Atlanta, will be toastmaster, and the Rt. Rev. Frank Damoulin, bishop coadjutor of the diocese of Ohio and an orator of national prominence, will be principal speaker. In addition, Bishop Mikell will speak and a layman from each church in the diocese will tell of the status of the nation-wide campaign in his home parish.

The dinner is being given to solicit interest in work the church is doing, not only in this diocese and nation, but throughout the world. The church's program for the next three years will be discussed, and it is hoped that the result will be that the local diocese, which has not fully met its share in carrying out the national program, may be encouraged to do so, not only for the year 1926, but also for 1925.

The dinner comes on the eve of the every-member canvass of the

You must consider the real factors that make for piano merit. Especially so when you choose an instrument that is to help shape your children's musical future.

Emphatically, the Brambach Baby Grand's popularity does not depend upon outside appearance alone. What is within the case is responsible for Brambach leadership. There are eight exclusive features or notes that explain Brambach's musical qualities. They are outlined in the booklet "The Brambach Octave of Merit." Write or call for a copy.

The Brambach is America's fastest selling Baby Grand. There are good reasons for that. If you are considering the purchase of a piano be sure to investigate Brambach before you decide.

Only the Brambach policy—large production of a quality instrument at lowest possible cost—makes its moderate price possible.

MAIER, PATTISON TO ARRIVE TODAY FOR CONCERT HERE

Guy Maier and Lee Pattison, world-famous duet pianists, will reach Atlanta late this afternoon to prepare for their first appearance here Tuesday night, presented at the auditorium by the Atlanta Music Club in the second concert of the civic concert series which was opened last month by Tito Schipa.

The concert will be the last one on the club's civic series during 1925. Ignace Paderewski, who is the third attraction of the season, will not be heard in Atlanta until January 28. The seat sale for the concert will begin this morning at the Cable Piano company, where the music club's downtown box office is located. Choice seats will be available in all parts of the auditorium at the opening of the sale, but officers of the club said that indications were that the demand would be brisk, advising early purchase of seats to insure preferred locations in the auditorium.

SOUNDING OF HORN NOT LAW REQUIREMENT

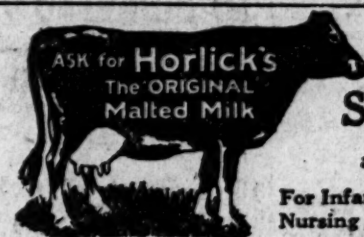

Georgia automobilists are not required by law to sound their horns or make other warning signals when they approach a street or highway intersection, unless the spot is classed as a "dangerous place," the court of appeals pointed out in a decision handed down Wednesday.

The case was that of R. E. O'Donnely, of Atlanta, against U. S. Stapler, of Milledgeville, and is the outgrowth of an automobile accident at the corner of Peachtree street and North avenue. Mr. O'Donnely sued to recover damages for injuries done his machine and the verdict was given to Mr. Stapler, the defendant. Mr. O'Donnely then appealed for new trial, which the trial judge refused. The court of appeals by its Wednesday decision reversed the ruling.

The decision held that the lower court erred in charging the jury, in effect, that Mr. O'Donnely could not recover unless the defendant was operating a car in violation of the law.

The plaintiff argued that Mr. Stapler was violating both the city ordinance limiting speed of automobiles and the state law prohibiting operation of a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. The court of appeals ruled that it was not necessary to prove that a state law had been violated in order to recover damages, and also held that the amount fixed as damages should equal the difference in the value of the car before the accident and after, including money spent for repairs and loss occasioned by inability to use the car.

Meeting Customers' Wishes Is Chief Consideration

THE magnitude of the Bell Telephone System and the extensive use of the service in America is always a source of amazement to foreign visitors. Americans, on the other hand, seem to accept this supremacy as a matter of course.

This outstanding leadership has been due to several contributing causes, but underlying all has been customer interest and co-operation and company effort to satisfy the needs and wishes of the public.

From the beginning of the business, service from the customers' viewpoint has been a subject of thoughtful consideration. In the early days, when only a few men of vision saw the possibility of such a system of communication, the chief concern was to learn the public need and meet it adequately.

To do this has required research, investigation and invention on a magnitude and at a cost never dreamed of by the pioneers.

That it has been justified is evidenced by the fact that America's telephone service is the cheapest and most efficient in the world.

Here, in this city and in this State, the Bell Telephone workers are striving to render the kind of service you want, and your friendly interest and co-operation contribute largely to our success in meeting your wishes.

ELKS AUXILIARY WILL PLAY SANTA

In order that there shall not be one childish heart with sorrow as its portion on Christmas morn, the Elks club, auxiliary of Lodge 78, B. P. O. E., of Atlanta, has undertaken the task of filling a stocking for every Atlanta child who otherwise would wake to tears of realization that, after all, there was no Santa Claus for them.

In order to raise the necessary money to buy candy, nuts, oranges and toys and all the other things that are associated with Christmas, the Elks club has organized a dance, to be held at the auditorium the night of Saturday, November 28.

Tickets, admitting couples may be purchased for $2. It is the hope of Elks club members that at least 1,000 Atlantans will avail themselves of this opportunity to provide a joyous Christmas morning for some poor child.

Beginning with the city, which has donated the use of the auditorium, and reaching to the humblest performer on the entertainment program, there will be no expenses to reduce the gross box office receipts.

In addition to the dance, there will be a program from the stage, details of which will be announced later.

City Real Estate Nets Mayor Sims $10,000 in Year

Concrete proof of the stability of Atlanta real estate and its steady enhancement in value was given in an announcement by Mayor Walter A. Sims Wednesday that he had completed a deal by which he conveyed a home on Peachtree street to a Florida electrical contractor, realizing a profit of 33 1-3 per cent within one year's time.

The property is located at 768 Peachtree street and is known as the old home of Judge Henry Tanner, who for years was Fulton county ordinary.

Mayor Sims said he bought the property as an investment a year ago, paying $50,000. The price the mayor received, he announced, was $40,000. The purchaser was Hawkes F. Thompson, prominent business man of Dayton.

"Mr. Thompson likes Atlanta so well that he intends to make this city his home and he will live in the house he bought from me," Mayor Sims added.

ESCAPED CONVICT SENTENCED HERE FOR AUTO THEFT

Abe Crosby, negro, was sentenced Wednesday to serve from two and a half to five years on Fulton county chain gang when he pleaded a plea of guilty to theft of an automobile belonging to T. G. Chastain, of East Point. Judge G. H. Howard, of Fulton superior court passed sentence, and Crosby told the court he is an escaped convict from the Alabama state penitentiary where he had served a short time on a 60-year term. Officers are investigating the negro's statement.

What You Will Save On Your Income Tax

THE CHEER OF THE APPROACHING Christmas season takes on an added glow with the publication of the House Ways and Means Committee's comprehensive program of tax-slashing, which puts in the exempt class a million small incomes taxed under the present law, and cuts in half the maximum surtax, the particular bane of the millionaires. At the same time, we are told, it relieves the pressure on the intermediate incomes. "Pretty much everybody" is going to get something in the revenue bill drafted by the House Committee, remarks the Philadelphia Record; and another Democratic daily, the Cleveland Plain Dealer, agrees that "from the point of view of small and large taxpayers alike the reductions offered are as substantial as reasonably could have been expected." The equity with which this bill distributes its tax relief is recognized and commended in many other editorial pages, and the Minneapolis Journal (Rep.) attributes this virtue to the fact that it is a compromise measure, embodying Democratic as well as Republican ideas of tax-reduction. THE LITERARY DIGEST, this week (November 21st Number) presents the subject from all angles. It also includes a table from which you can determine the amount of income tax you will have to pay next March.

Red Russia's Rage at "The Concert of Locarno"

A NEW CONCERT OF EUROPEAN POWERS, from which Russia has been significantly excluded, was organized at the Locarno Conference, says the Soviet press angrily, adding that the so-called "lasting peace of Locarno," which European statesmen have been rejoicing over, may prove to be "a united front" and perhaps "a new war against Soviet Russia." Soviet leaders and newspapers give vent to their indignation over the new international situation resulting from the Locarno negotiations, by such exclamations as "Germany has capitulated," and "England has won a great diplomatic victory." In THE LITERARY DIGEST, this week, you will find an enlightening article comprising translations from the Soviet press which reveal very clearly the feelings of the Russian government over the recent agreement arrived at by the great European powers at Locarno.

NEW DAY IN GEORGIA.

The highway bond elections in both Habersham and Whitfield counties Tuesday emphasize the rapidly-changing sentiment throughout Georgia in the matter of utilizing credit for permanent improvements.

Within a year Habersham reversed herself. A proposed road bond issue met a stinging defeat only a few months ago. It carried by a vote of seven to one Tuesday—a veritable tidal wave.

Whitfield had also previously voted down a road bond issue, but the interim between the defeat and the victory was longer. However, the illustration as to the unmistakable trend of thought is no less striking. In Whitfield county every precinct rolled up a substantial bond majority Tuesday—and, as in Habersham, one of the outstanding features was the overwhelming bond majorities registered in wholly rural districts.

The argument has heretofore been made that road bond issues, which are carried and retired very largely by the towns and cities, are usually defeated by the rural vote. In the past it has been true. The Habersham and Whitfield, and other county road bond issues recently voted, however, have shown a complete change in the sentiment in strictly rural communities. Rural centers have voiced the same spirit of progressiveness as the municipalities.

There is reason to believe this sentiment is widespread, and at present inviolate throughout the rural sections of the state.

In addition to the great bond victories in Habersham and Whitfield—which are of peculiar statewide interest, as both are keystone counties in important trunk-line highways—the city of Thomaston, in Upson county, voted paving bonds, the city of Zebulon, in Pike county, voted school bonds, and the county commissioners of Bibb voted to pave six miles in Lamar, a new county, in the program for the completion of the Atlanta-Macon highway—a most commendable act, and a spirit of helpfulness from the strong to the weak that is sweeping Georgia, and was the inviting feature of the coastal zone bond election of a year ago.

The whole illustrates a complete renaissance, and ushers in a new day in Georgia.

The provision for the building of Whitfield's link in the Dixie highway from Chattanooga to Atlanta leaves now only Gordon and Bartow, both of which have most of the preliminary road work completed, and both of which are preparing to vote bonds for hard surfacing—that is to say, for the permanency that is so necessary to the heavy traffic all-year-around, and to reduce the expenses of maintenance which are intolerable on a temporary main highway over which a thousand to fifteen hundred motor cars pass a day.

The Habersham highways now provided for will supply the missing links in two important interstate routes, one the scenic highway from Atlanta to Asheville via Gainesville, Cornelia, Clarksville, Tallulah Falls, Clayton and Franklin, N. C. The other, the north and south highway from Atlanta to the east, through the Carolinas, Virginia and Washington. This latter route follows the Southern railroad's tracks from Atlanta to Washington, and from its main highway laterals at Spartanburg and Greenville lead into the western North Carolina mountains, and from Charlotte, Greensboro, Danville, Lynchburg, Charlottesville and other centers throughout the entire United States.

It can be seen at a glance, therefore, what an enormous victory has been won for permanent highways in Georgia by the Habersham bond victory.

The people of Georgia, at no time in the history of the state, have been so alert to internal improvements, to school expansions, and to general developments that shall place the state in the procession of progress, as today.

Appraisement by comparisons has fired the citizens of Georgia to action.

With soil, climate, raw products, power, unlimited natural resources, and as good people as there are on earth, they are determined to stop following and begin leading—as, by every right, they should.

It is the dawn of a new economic day.

THE MERCHANT MARINE.

The national merchant marine conference held in Washington this week to consider the nation's duty in the present very distressing situation as to her trade fleet, and the future control, made sound recommendations, and the same that have been voiced by The Constitution at various times.

It agreed that the government should for a time subsidize American shipping, and reorganize the present conflicting agencies—the United States shipping board and the emergency fleet corporation—into one central board, or commission, of three, from the three great coastal sections of America, with distinctive regional advisory boards to act in conjunction in all regulatory matters affecting their respective sections.

Both of these recommendations are vital if this nation ever expects to regain her former position in the trade lanes of the seas. Since the war the government vessels have been handled in a most disastrous manner, with conflicting policies of control, eventuating in staggering losses to the taxpayers of the nation. Vessels have been sacrificed, old trade lines embarrassed, rate discriminations encouraged, and the flag of American commerce dipped into the muddy waters of jealousy, revenge, intrigue—almost into disgrace.

When the late President Harding urged congress to permit concessions to the American interests that would qualify and help rehabilitate the merchant marine, without a continuation of the enormous drain upon the country's treasury, and permitting the salvaging of the hundreds of bottoms then rotting at shipyards throughout the country, The Constitution endorsed the proposal. It was in line with the policy of Great Britain, the master of the seas by reason of it. Subsequent facts have developed that the treasury of the United States today would be richer by several hundreds of millions of dollars had those concessions been granted, and the government retired from the physical and financial operation of shipping businesses which did not, and do not today, belong to its legitimate functions. The word "subsidy" perhaps is largely responsible for the unfavorable action of congress, forgetful that it established the great mail-carrier rail system of this country by such subsidies, and that it rehabilitated the railroads after the war with temporary subsidies, and that if it places commercial air navigation upon a basis useful to all the people, it must adopt the same policy. Prejudices are too frequently aroused by misunderstanding of facts. The so-called "subsidy" to the merchant shipping interests, as is proposed, does not mean to give such interests anything to which they would not be fairly entitled, but it does mean to properly and equitably encourage, by concessions and financial aid, such organizations until they shall have become self-sustaining in their undertakings to pull the American government out of a deep and threatening hole.

This will probably be one of the big issues before the approaching congress, and should the recommendations of the Washington conference be given favorable consideration the country's merchant trade flag may proudly fly again, and assuredly the treasury will be better off by several million dollars a year.

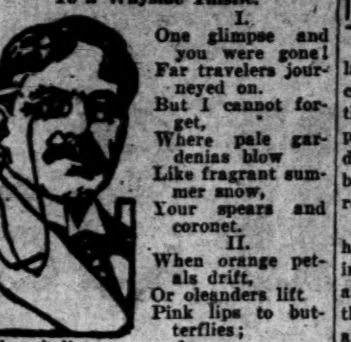

And King Tut doesn't even know that after the sleep of several thousand years he's worth his weight in gold.

Injun Summer round about, Peaceful nights are passing. Why not trot the Injuns out? An' let 'em stir a blaze?

Briefs from Billville.

Being thankful for what you receive is a sign that you're doing as well as your friends said you wouldn't. A man who is thankful for a crust on the table and a pallet on the floor is not so numerous that you can't count him.

If all the kickers hustled like the football boys, there'd be something doing in the old world every day in the year.

When you have troubles to burn, strike a light and make 'em blaze.

A Friend's Warm Tribute To the Late C. B. Bidwell

Editor Constitution: C. B. Bidwell is dead. About his form, the hush and quiet of the long night is fallen. The tired heart, the brilliant mind, the great dream and dreamer, the master of the seas, has slowly slipped his hold on the problems around which he had long and relentlessly moved, and tired brain, tired hands and tired feet, at last at rest.

He was a man of the highest type, a sleep—sleeps in the dignity and the majesty which envelops him who has achieved laborious tasks, who has solved great problems, who has done A MAN'S work—and then, when he is at last at rest, he is placed in the crowd to sink into the silence of well-earned slumber, content as he passes into the nothing dark, knowing that what was done was well done and little is left undone.

And when the premiere night of the Metropolitan Opera comes again with next April's starry skies, and a vast throng in festive attire gathers in the great auditorium, when the deep hush falls, as the curtain rises and the blaze of drums, the melody of harps and the strident notes of the violin crash and break into the opening overture, somewhere, some how, amid the roll and swell of the music, ever great and ever beautiful, his loyal spirit will hover, silent above the brilliant throng, exultant that his work for his beloved city so finely on, and unless the heart of Atlanta is shallow and ungrateful, which she could not be, no, not to him, scores in that great audience will pause to do tribute to the one empty chair in the great assembly, the vacant seat of the master worker.

The decision of the supreme court last week, sustaining the superior court of Bibb county and affirming the constitutionality of the tax imposed by the legislature of 1924 upon dealers in coal, coke, wood and lumber, has an important bearing on the reforestation program in Georgia.

The advocates of forestry legislation had nothing whatever to do with laying this tax on lumber dealers, and although the legislature of 1924 added the two words "and lumber" to an amendment to the general tax act of 1923, the matter was not generally known, especially by the advocates of the forestry legislation, until after the constitutionality of paragraph 44 of the general tax act had been contested and lost in the Bibb county courts.

The legislative program of the Georgia Forestry association had carried a moderate schedule of privilege taxes for a number of years, to be distributed over the yield of all forest product industries and to be used for financing forestry work in Georgia.

The forestry measure was tabled in 1923, and failed to reach a final vote in the legislature of 1924, due largely to legislative jams and congestion. In 1925, however, the forestry administration was passed by the house of representatives by a record vote, and passed unanimously by the senate, including a blanket provision for setting aside into the state forestry fund all "occupation, license or privilege taxes required of persons or corporations engaging in any business dealing with lumber or other products from the forests of this state."

It is understood that the lumber dealers generally throughout the state were made more favorable to the special tax placed on them in 1924 when the legislature of 1925 converted this tax from the treasury into the special forestry fund. The state board of forestry was created for the purpose of dispensing state aid for the perpetuation of forest product industries and the forests which support them.

The case before the supreme court, therefore, questioning the constitutionality of the lumber tax, although being prior to the last session of the legislature, would have seriously delayed the reforestation program if it had been decided differently.

The state forestry commission has some foresight in splendid way, since the act creating the same was signed by the governor on August 14, 1925, and at its first meeting on September 12, steps were taken immediately to develop an organization of deputy forest wardens, and to secure federal aid under the Clark McNary act of the U. S. congress for cooperative work with private timber owners in Georgia.

An organization committee of the program for educational and fire law enforcement work, and on October 15 the commission approved the report of this committee, elected B. M. Lufburrow—a native Georgian having wide experience in forestry—to the office of state forester, and elected an executive committee composed of Bonnell H. Stone, chairman, Dr. S. W. McCallie and C. B. Harman, to cooperate closely with the forester in every phase of the work.

The federal forest service very promptly agreed that 100 per cent of Georgia's funds would be matched by the federal government. At the end of his first month's service the state forester has laid a broad foundation for forest fire prevention and control in Georgia, while the necessary funds will make this work

With this creditable beginning in the actual performance of work, under the state policy of reforestation, it is most gratifying to know that public sentiment in Georgia is strongly behind it.

Expressing in the strongest terms their entire approbation of the plan to build and endow Woodrow Wilson college at Valdosta, the board of directors of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce has advocated a quota of $250,000 for the capital city's share in the enterprise. P. A. Stovall, state chairman, W. C. Eager and R. C. Mizzell were guests upon the progress which has been made. In view of recent campaigns in Atlanta the board is anxious to set a date for Atlanta's contribution some time after January 1.

$85,000 DAMAGES ASKED IN 3 SUITS

Three suits aggregating $85,000 were filed Wednesday in the city court of Atlanta, two against the Georgia Railway and Power company, and one against H. C. Cooper. All three suits claim damages for injuries.

Two actions were directed against the power company by Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Smith. The latter asks $50,000 for injuries alleged to have been received by her on June 2, 1925, when she is said to have been thrown from the steps of an East Point trolley.

Mr. Smith asks the court to award him $20,000 damages for loss of his wife's services and doctors' bills.

John Johnson filed a petition for $15,000 against Cooper for injuries alleged to have been received by her daughter, Miss Jewell Johnson, 19, at Atlanta and Forsyth street on June 4, 1924, when an automobile driven by the defendant struck the young woman.

The forestry commission of Georgia is charged with a great work. A definite state policy—"to encourage reforestation of cut-over lands, and timber culture generally, on all lands not better suited for farming or other purposes"—means a very great deal for the best development of our state.

The Forestry association has been doing a most constructive work in its efforts to benefit the lumber industry and in the creation of this state policy to help smooth out any unjust differences, in the taxation now in force, through regular legislative procedure.

The state commission deserves, and has a right to expect, the full cooperation of all good citizens of Georgia in this vitally important work.

The deputy forest wardens, who are being appointed throughout Georgia today, are outstanding, patriotic citizens, who will serve without compensation from the state, and their duties of law enforcement have primary concern in the fire law of the penal code of 1910.

Signs, posters and notices are being prepared for distribution to the wardens, and full equipment and supplies are being collected for distribution from the state forester's office.

The next step under the organization of the commission will be the appointment of forest patrolmen, to be partly paid by private timber owners, and partly paid by the state and federal government, whose duties will include the actual suppression and control of forest fires on areas under cooperative management and state supervision.

The free assistance and cooperation of the state forester will be available to all citizens as time and funds will permit, and aside from fire law enforcement there are no provisions in the forestry act for regulation or force in the handling of forest problems in Georgia.

With this creditable beginning in the actual performance of work, under the state policy of reforestation, it is most gratifying to know that public sentiment in Georgia is strongly behind it.

Victory Over Alabama Would Wipe Out Defeats; Squad in Good Condition

BY MARCUS BRYANT.
Athens, Ga., November 18.—(Special.)—Football, with all its glory, will be renewed for the Georgia Bulldogs Thursday. Following the Tech game of last Saturday the Red and Black has enjoyed a two-day lay off and Wednesday ended a third day of rest.
Beginning Thursday Coaches Woodruff, Mehre and Crowley will assemble the Bulldogs for the first time of the week and begin preparation for the game with Alabama's Crimson Tide at Birmingham Thanksgiving day—lowering the curtain as far as the 1925 season is concerned.
The Bulldogs returned from the game with the Jackets in good condition, no serious casualties resulting. Several minor hurts have been rounded into good condition by the first day of practice, however, and the Bulldogs will hurl their greatest strength against the Crimson Tide, unless unforeseen hurts make their way into local camp.
Against Alabama the Bulldogs have nothing to lose and everything to win. Though defeated by three conference teams this season, the Bulldogs are determined to stem the Alabama Tide, which has swelled into a second consecutive conference championship is within their grasp.
Glory Path Blocked.
Nothing lies in the Alabama path toward a second championship with the exception of the turkey day battle.

Says Ed is Skinniest Man in Town

Cheerup, Ed—things aren't as bad as they look to you right now. Many hundreds of skinnies, gaunt, emaciated men looked even worse than you do till someone told them about McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets (the new way to take Cod Liver Oil) and how it would put pounds of good firm, healthy flesh on their bones in just a few weeks.
Nothing like these health creating, weight producing tablets for skinnies, underweight men, as thousands can testify. Start to take them today—60 tablets—60 cents at Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., or any druggist anywhere.
And listen: If they don't put 5 pounds of good flesh on you in 30 days, your druggist is authorized to hand you back the money you paid for them.
That's fair enough, but be sure—very sure, that you get McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—the original and genuine.—(adv.)

FURMAN MEETS WAKE FOREST

Greenville, S. C., November 18.—hour and at times displayed some fine (Special.)—With only two days preparation, the Purple Hurricane will leave the city at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon for Asheville where they will play the strong Wake Forest eleven at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon on McCormick field.
Furman began Monday training for this big game. The varsity had a light signal drill and then retired to the showers. A very different program was followed by the B and C varsity teams. These players put up a lively scrimmage for more than an hour.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.
The retirement of Jim Thorpe, who found it too hard to keep in football condition after so many years of strenuous competition, points the old moral that brains last longer than muscles. Jim Thorpe, once the greatest athlete in the world, is out. His old football coach, who made him famous, is at the height of his career today in the best position he ever held. His coach at Stanford University, Pop Warner, is still devising new plays and making the football world "watch the old man."
When Jim Thorpe was playing football at Carlisle, the once famous but now defunct Indian school, there was no greater grilling warrior in America. Thorpe was a tremendous line backer, a lightning fast runner with the ball, and the greatest field goal kicker in captivity. And he was developed from good raw material by Coach Warner. Thorpe didn't care much about any other man, but Warner had his good reason. Warner was a broad, rugged, husky fellow, who could use force when diplomacy failed.
He once had occasion to discipline Jim for breaking training rules. Instead of using arguments that might slide off Jim's back like raindrops from a greased pavement Warner grappled, picked Jim up, threw him down, and sat on him until he was ready to listen to reason. From that time on Thorpe lived and played exactly as Warner told him to.
Warner's Great Coach.
Glenn Warner is reputed to have originated more football plays than any other coach. Starting as coach at Carlisle he became famous through the great Indian teams he turned out and the unexpected plays the Indians used.
One of Warner's bright inventions was used to beat Harvard, and created a roar of protest from the astonished collegians. This was the time a Carlisle runner dropped back into a group of backs after the ball was collected, and then ran down the line and on down the field waving his arms and undisturbed by tackling, with the ball neatly tucked up under his jersey behind and out of sight, scoring a touchdown before the bewildered Crimson players discovered where the pigskin had gone. The rule was changed next year to prevent a repetition of this neat trick, but it had worked once, which was all the coach wanted.
Warner is almost mild in his coaching methods, but he doesn't need to be at his men. They respect him. He has football brains, and everyone knows it. He follows the idea that five or six plays perfectly executed are better than 20 that lack precision. Warner doesn't make a mystery of his formations. He has been known to diagram plays he intended to use in certain games and give them to the opposing coaches. This was Michaelis' diplomacy. The opposing coaches suspected a trick and ignoring the diagrams coached their men to expect anything else.
Recently Warner sprung a novel play and brother coaches asked him how he happened to figure it out. Smiling broadly the veteran replied that he had used the same play for 20 years, but used it only every other year, with very slight variations, and each time everybody thought it was brand new.
Pop Warner has had remarkable success with his team since going to Stanford. Last year the Stanford team, with only seven minutes left to play in the last quarter of a terrific battle with the long undefeated California team, and the score 20 to 7 against them, cut loose a bewildering and desperate attack and finished 20 to 20. Two men died of heart failure in the grandstands. This year Stanford beat U. S. C., a team reputed to be the fastest scoring machine in the west, favorite in the betting to win over Stanford by at least 15 points.
Brains win. Coach Warner will last a long time and produce many more winning teams after Jim Thorpe has retired to his farm and has become only a tradition in the world of sport.

Captainless Team.
One of the queerest situations in college football has developed at the University of Southern California, which has gone through the season without a football team captain and has had to defer electing one for this year until the playing season is over. The first captain in command at the moment has picked his brother fraternity men to carry the ball when within striking distance of the enemy goal line, some times with disastrous results. That complication may be tied in other colleges that have fraternities but it can't be beaten.

MANY HEROES MISS CUT IN SERIES

BY IRWIN M. HOWE.
Walter Johnson failed for 15 years on a major league ball team before he broke into a world series. There are not a few among the baseball greats who wonder if it will take as long before they are handed a slice from the financial melon, cut annually after the curtain has been rung down on the regular season.
A tear might be shed for Rogers Hornsby. Despite the fact that he has led the sluggers in the National league for six successive years he has never had a chance to show what he could do against American league pitching in the post-season classics. His repeated 400 sticking average has been an utter waste so far as the blue ribbon event is concerned. His home runs have sounded hollow.
Howard Ehmke of the Red Sox, with a no-hit, no-run feat back of him, has never had a chance to fool the National league sluggers. No National league slugger has ever been unfortunate enough to face his knuckle ball, even though Ed was theoretically a member of the Giants once.
Charles Grimm of the Chicago Cubs, rated as one of the shining lights of the majors around first base, got out of Pittsburgh one year too soon. He left a championship aggregation to hook up with a tail ender, and a fourth place outfit the ultimate in ill luck.
Harry Hellmann has been there or thereabouts in stick work for years but he has never been given a glimmer of encouragement when it comes to cutting in on a world series. He did draw down $292.80 as his share from a fourth place outfit this season, no sum for the player who led the American league in hitting.
"Baby Doll" Jackson, of the St. Louis Browns, never had an opportunity to show in the series how he set a record in center field putouts now how to propel the ball over the fence. Johnny Mostil of Chicago didn't become great soon enough so failed to figure in the extra dividend which went to the White Sox in 1919, which was probably just as well considering what happened later. The record holder in the American league for the past season, both in runs and stolen bases, has been on the sidelines for several years.
George Sisler has never been present when the "leg" was divided. Hard to see for the man who was counted the "most valuable" player in the American league once.
And there is Dazzy Vance, strike king. Just two years later in joining Brooklyn. The results might have been different had he faced the Cleveland Indians in 1920.
There are others among the elite who have failed to connect. Among these might be counted Ken Williams of the St. Louis Browns, and Bill Shelden of the Cardinals. Not to mention Urban Shocker. Urban thought he was on the way when he was traded to the Yankees but as luck would have it the former champions finished among the also rans.
But it isn't all money. Any one of these stars would probably be willing to forego the cash if they could put with pride to the public which sets them apart from their fellows.

All-Southern Stars Fade From Picture; Jones, Camp, Hudson, Buckler Also Leave

BY BOB MATHERNE.
University, Ala., November 18.—(Special.)—Seven Crimson stars will cease gridiron activities for the University of Alabama on Thanksgiving day when Alabama plays Georgia at Rickwood field.
These men, all great performers in their own right, are: Pooley Hubert, Johnny Mack Brown, Grant Gillis, Ben Hudson, Bruce Jones, Bill Buckler and "Pete" Camp.
You can look far and wide throughout this nation and you will see few teams losing as many men as that this year. And it will be few men whose loss be as much strength gone as Alabama will have taken away this year.

Of the seven men, two have already graced all-southern teams and three will probably be honored in such fashion this year, providing that Alabama wins from Georgia. Gillis was all-southern conference quarterback in 1923 and Hubert was all-southern halfback in 1924. Mack Brown and Hubert will probably land on the backfield of the mythical all-southern team this year and Buckler stands little chance of being placed on any other team. And Camp, who has been a regular on the varsity since 1924, will be a regular on the team. That's all to be decided, with this Georgia game counting a big factor in it, but wait and see.
With the exception of Hubert and Gillis, all other performers were "rats" together and played on Coach Henry Crisp's "rat" eleven in the fall of 1922. Unless the writer is mistaken on the fresh eleven suffered a rather disastrous year in matters of games won and lost. But every man of the five still here were regulars on the varsity team the next year and have been since. Hudson was the only one, and Brown, too, perhaps, who did not play game in and game out throughout the season.
The seven retiring members of the Crimson Tide will be the prime factors in the stubborn resistance to be made against the variety squad and Georgia Bulldogs on turkey day. Hubert and Mack Brown are certain to start, and Gillis may be one of the four backs. Hudson is likely to be a reserve at end, and the two guards will be taken care of by Captain Bruce Jones and Bill Buckler. There is a chance that Camp and his career against Florida last Saturday, for this heavy tackle was removed from the game before the half was up. His injuries are such that it is likely he won't be able to play any more this season.
There's no telling what the Crimson will resort to next Thursday to beat Georgia, but that part of the affair is being worked out at Denny field by the Crimson mentors. The four backs, who ended their scheduled undefeated Saturday for the third time in three years, were trotted over to Denny field to learn Georgia plays and scrimmages against such formations are more likely to be the mode of practice for the next ten days. Anyway, Alabama has a diversified attack and there won't be any holding back against Georgia. It's no use saving plays for next September when a conference title is at stake.
The Crimson practiced lightly the first of the week. They punted quite a bit with Hubert, Barnes, Johnson, Brown and Gillis doing this phase of the work. They passed with the same group plus Rosenfeld, Winslett and Caldwell doing the passing. Every little thing except scrimmages was indulged in. The other words, it is going to be a full T with a great stroke ready to down out the efforts of the Bulldogs.

OFFICIAL 100-YD. RECORD IS 9 3-5

New York, November 18.—(AP)—Contrary to the impression given at its recent annual convention in Pittsburgh, the Amateur Athletic union disclosed through its headquarters here that the mark of 9 3-5 seconds for 100 yards by Jackson V. Scholz has not been accepted as a new American track record.
Daniel J. Ferris, assistant secretary of the A. A. U., explained that the application for Scholz's record which would displace the mark of 9 3-5 seconds that has stood on the books since 1906 had been tabled to permit further investigation of the circumstances attending its achievement in a race at Greensboro, N. C., last May.
If it is possible, Ferris pointed out, that this probe may substantiate Scholz's claims and put his record on the books, but this cannot be determined finally until next year's annual meeting.

Seven Conference Teams To Be Active Saturday

New Orleans, November 18.—(By the Associated Press.)—Although only seven of the 22 teams of the southern conference have football engagements for Saturday afternoon, it will be a busy day for a number of teams in the south.
Mercer and Oglethorpe playing in Atlanta, may be expected to offer their usual exciting contest and the annual game between Howard and Birmingham Southern at Birmingham can never be taken lightly.
Arkansas and Oklahoma A. and M. at Fayetteville promises a regular game.
Butler comes from Indiana to Shreveport to attempt to wipe out a defeat suffered last year.
Virginia teams with rivalry of years behind them play at Roanoke, meets William and Mary at Roanoke and Hampden-Sydney plays Randolph-Macon at Richmond.
The Citadel will play Erskine at Charleston in a South Carolina game and Florida teams clash in the game between Southern and Rollins at Winter Park.
Transylvania travels from Kentucky to play Maryville at Maryville, Tenn.

FOUR NEW MANAGERS IN TEXAS LEAGUE IN '26

There will be four new managers in the Texas league next season from the looks of things. Syd Smith will not pilot the Shreveport team, according to President Hiedenhorn of the Sports; there is a vacancy at Houston, where the late Marvin Goodwin held forth until he was bought by the Cincinnati Reds; Buddy Tunner has resigned as Wichita Falls chief, and Bob Coleman quit at San Antonio when the season closed.

The card in question was from a Macon fan, praising the spirit displayed at the recent Tech-Georgia game and stating that a Tech High-U. S. B. game should be played under similar conditions.
The game, if arranged, would be a prep classic and would attract a record crowd.

Military and Civilian Society Honors General and Mrs. Hagood

The most distinguished representatives of the United States army, the military and civilian social contingent throughout the south assembled to pay a tribute of welcome to Major General Johnson Hagood, new commanding officer of the fourth corps area, and Mrs. Hagood at the brilliant reception given at the Service club at Fort McPherson Wednesday evening. Acting as hosts of this lovely occasion were the officers and ladies of the regular army community in the environs of Atlanta, embracing the fourth corps area headquarters, 22d infantry and all officers stationed at Fort McPherson, the fourth coast artillery district, and the officers on duty in and around the city.

The reception apartment of the club presented a scene of military splendor, with the decorations of flags and national emblems gracefully combined with masses of rich tropical plants and brilliantly tinted autumn foliage, the whole forming a charming setting for the exquisite costumes of the ladies and the olive drab of the officers' uniforms embellished with polished insignia and glistening sabers.

Reception Music.
The 22d infantry band furnished music during the reception hours and for the dancing which followed. At 11 o'clock supper was served buffet style from attractively appointed tables placed in the dining room of the club. Tall French baskets filled with vari-colored chrysanthemums adorned the tables.

Receiving with General Hagood and Mrs. Hagood were General LeRoy Eltinge and Mrs. Eltinge; Colonel Thomas W. Darrah and Mrs. Darrah; Colonel Andrew Hero, Jr., and Mrs. Hero; Colonel William R. Dashiell and Mrs. Dashiell.

Captain Alexander R. Bolling, of the 22d infantry, introduced the guests.

Costumes Worn.
Mrs. Hagood was handsomely gowned for the occasion in a French model of softest white chiffon velvet fashionably draped and finished with a tracery of pearls and crystals.

Mrs. Eltinge wore a becoming gown of shell pink satin.

Mrs. Dashiell wore a handsome black velvet gown.

Mrs. Hero wore a beautiful import-

How Much Should I Give To The Community Chest?

(Written by a Friend of the Chest.)

So often people ask us: "What shall I give? How shall I figure it? What percentage of my income?" I want to try to answer that question once for all. I believe I can tell each of you exactly how much to give, or rather the exact way in which to figure it, and this is my answer—

You take your subscription card and your pencil in your hand, shut your eyes, and silently say to God: "Oh, God, I thank you for all that you have done for me. I thank you that of all human beings you have selected me upon whom to bestow the best mother that ever lived, the noblest father. I thank you for my wife, my children, my sisters, my brothers, my friends. I thank you for my books and for my other pleasures, for my dreams and aspirations, my health, my strength, yea, for the abundant joys of my life. Sometimes, unthinkingly, I grumble, but in sane reflection I know how blessed and how fortunate I am. My whole being overflows with gratitude. My cup runneth over."

And then you open your eyes again, and with love and mercy, and love tugging at your heart, you write your subscription upon your card, and THAT, you may be sure, will be the right amount to give.

BEAUTY CHATS BY EDNA M. FORBES.

NIGHT TREATMENT FOR WRINKLES.

If your are threatened with wrinkles, you can do a great deal about keeping them away indefinitely—yes, I mean indefinitely—by going to bed half an hour earlier and using the half hour for the following treatment. Make up my cold cream formula both ways—with mineral oil as a cleansing cream, and with vegetable as a flesh builder. (If you have it, it is in my pamphlet "Beauty.") Beat up the white of an egg, adding a teaspoonful of vinegar, and as much powdered borax and powdered camphor as will go, each, on top of a 10c piece. Stir this well, put the whole amount into a small, wide-mouthed bottle and keep for use. Keep a small, soft paint brush near as you put this on with a brush.

Now for the treatment. Rub the skin with cleansing cream and wipe off with a cloth wrung from hot water. Wring out the cloth again, and hold over the face, so that the blood comes to the skin and the pores open—it takes but a minute. Put this gummy egg lotion on thickly and lie down. If possible keep your eyes shut, and relax as much as you can. The stringent tightens like a mask over the face and draws out the wrinkles. After 15 minutes wash off with hot water and rub in the flesh building cream. Massage well into the skin for five minutes longer if possible. Wipe off with a dry cloth and go to bed.

Much of the cream is in the skin, which will take it up doing the night. Next morning wash the face with ice cold water and nothing else. This treatment is so stimulating that minor blemishes, tiny scars, freckles and such things will disappear. Large pores will contract, the skin will be clear and take delicious tints. Try it for a month or two and see how you like it.

Distressed Mary Ann—Any bleach is drying to the skin, so you should always follow it up with a massage using a cream or a fine oil.

Miss F. G. H.—Small moles are not disfiguring so there should be no need to bleach them, and a large mole if it really disfigures should be removed by a doctor as unskilled handling is very dangerous and might result in a scar. Never tamper with a mole yourself!

Young Mother—Sleeping with the mouth open and snoring may indicate that the child has adenoids. It would be well to have a doctor examine him.

Mrs. Emily G.—You can tint the stray gray hair by using a henna shampoo; this will not be a dye and it will not injure your hair nor your health. To do this, mix the small package of Egyptian henna that comes for a shampoo with your lather and rub it well into the hair and scalp. Let this stay on the hair for about 15 minutes, as a trial, and then proceed as with any other shampooing method. The natural shade of your hair will not be affected, and the stray white hair will be tinted enough not to show.

Tomorrow—Lotions and Accessories. Edna Kent Forbes is now ready to fill a long-felt need on the part of her readers—that of supplying the most important of her excellent beauty hints in illustrated pamphlet form. To secure this valuable information you must address Miss Forbes in care of The Atlanta Constitution, asking for her pamphlet, "Beauty," and enclosing a stamped (self-addressed envelope (s.a.e.)) and ten cents in stamps.

Miss Rapp Weds Lt. Mitchell, U.S. A., at Ceremony in West Virginia

The marriage of Miss Mary Virginia Rapp, of Clarksburg, W. Va., and Lieutenant William Mitchell, of the twenty-second infantry, Fort Mifflin, Pa., was solemnized at 8:30 in the Episcopal church, Clarksburg, and is of outstanding interest to the host of friends of the young couple throughout Georgia.

The Rev. J. T. Carter, rector of Christ church, performed the impressive ceremony in the presence of a distinguished gathering of relatives and friends.

Within the chancel rail, a profusion of palms and ferns were banked on either side interspersed with floor baskets of shaggy white chrysanthemums, these same lovely flowers alternating with tall candlesticks burning huge white tapers, forming an aisle to the altar. Back of the altar a pyramid effect of palms, ferns and clusters of white chrysanthemums was formed, while myriads of lighted white tapers flickered amongst the foliage.

Bridal Party.
The ushers included Haymon Rapp, brother of the bride; Charles Burke, Edwin W. Mitchell, Jr., and Benjamin F. Robinson, all of Clarksburg.

The groomsmen included the classmate of Lieutenant Mitchell in the class of 1920, who were Lieutenants Thomas D. White, Bolling Field, District of Columbia; J. E. Nelson, Fort McPherson; Dwight A. Rosebaum, Fort Monmouth, N. J.; Ford Trimble, Baltimore, aide to Major General

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY The Pequot War

THE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE CONNECTICUT SETTLEMENTS ANGERED THE PEQUOTS, A POWERFUL TRIBE OF INDIANS LIVING IN THAT REGION, AND THEY BEGAN TO LOOK FOR THE CHANCE TO ATTACK THE WHITE MEN.

ALARMED BY THE HOSTILE ATTITUDE OF THE PEQUOTS, THE CONNECTICUT SETTLERS, NOT WAITING TO BE ATTACKED, TOOK UP ARMS AND PREPARED TO STRIKE THE FIRST BLOW.

A FORCE OF SOLDIERS WAS SENT TO HELP THEM FROM MASSACHUSETTS, AND TOGETHER THEY MARCHED AWAY TO MAKE WAR ON THE PEQUOTS.

by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

IN 1637 THE UNITED FORCES OF MASSACHUSETTS AND CONNECTICUT, WITH THE AID OF SOME INDIANS WHO HATED THE PEQUOTS, MADE A SURPRISE ATTACK ON THE STRONGHOLD OF THE ENEMY AND KILLED NEARLY FOUR HUNDRED OF THEM—ONLY FIVE PEQUOTS ESCAPED TO WARN THE REST OF THE TRIBE.

THE REMAINING PEQUOTS FORTIFIED THEMSELVES IN A SWAMP NOT FAR FROM NEW HAVEN, WHERE THEY WERE SOON SURROUNDED BY THE COLONISTS. AND IN THE BATTLE THAT FOLLOWED THE LAST OF THE PEQUOTS WERE KILLED.

IT WAS A BLOODY BUSINESS BUT IT BROUGHT THE WHITE MEN PEACE FOR A LONG TIME.

TOMORROW—MAINE AND NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Uncle Ray's Corner The Story of Sohrab and Rustam

Part II—The Fatal Meeting.
Sohrab led his army into Persia, and his heart beat swiftly and hard as he neared the capital city.

"Now I shall meet my father," he thought, "and my army will place him on the throne."

The army of Touran struck camp outside the city. The Persians called Rustam, but neither armor nor shield bore proof of the fact.

"Let us go beyond the lines of the two armies," cried Rustam, "let us decide the battle by private combat."

Rustam looked at the rival leader, and said gravely, "Oh, young man, I have tenderness for you, and do not wish to rob you of life. Join Persia, and your life shall be spared."

"No, I am not," said Rustam, "I am a Persian, and I must ask you, 'Are you the hero Rustam?'"

"Then let us fight," cried Sohrab. The horses were lashed, and the two came together with fury. Rustam tried his favorite trick of battle. Flinging his arms around the waist of his rival, he tried to lift him out of the saddle. The effort failed, and Sohrab's battle-axe struck Rustam on the shoulder.

With drawn swords, the combat was kept up; but neither could give the death blow. Worn out, they agreed to meet again on the morrow.

The fight on the second day was fast and furious. At last Rustam was victorious. He struck Sohrab on the forehead with his battle-axe, and Sohrab fell to the ground, his arms around the waist of his rival, he tried to lift him out of the saddle. The effort failed, and Sohrab's battle-axe struck Rustam on the shoulder.

JOANNA

BY H. L. GATES

INSTALLMENT XXXI.

While Martha busied herself with the taps over the pink marble pool in a glistening shower-room, the girl in the bed sat up, drew up her knees until her elbows could rest on them and her chin on her wrists. Her brow wrinkled a little, as if trying to remember. The warm sunshine wrapped the cuddled figure in yellow splendor. This shadow lines from the diamond patterned bars of the clematis trellis outside the windows romped through the filmy, diaphanous chiffon of the girl's pajamas and twisted about her like mischievous fairy arms. Suddenly the puckered brow cleared and a laugh that was as vibrant as music rippled at red lips.

Martha turned off her taps, satisfied at last that the water was just warm enough—her mistress ever refused to brave a cold shower—and went up to the bed, a flaming yellow robe of transparent silk over her arm, tiny satin bodice mules in her hand. While she knelt at the bed dais to slip the mules on bare feet, and then stoop to receive the slim form in the fold of the robe, the voice promised:

"If you haven't told the water too cold, Martha, I'll tell you what was that happened last night as soon as I'm in her. It's cold you shan't know a thing."

When the robe had fallen and the pajamas had been tossed, rolled into a ball, at Martha's head, and the splashing in the marble pool was begun, Martha was merrily informed: "I stole Prince Michael, Martha! Actually took him right out of Yvonne's arms, actually, that is, figuratively speaking or something like that, and ran away with him. Mad flight over the boulevard by the sea at midnight, across Monaco and up the stone road into the Alps. Ooh! Martha, you made it almost too cold. Please turn on a little more warm! It was thrilling, Martha, that wild ride through the moonlight, all alone with the prince—alone except the driver and he didn't count, of course. And Michael was in a real moonlight mood, too. Because, there, now it's too hot! Why don't they make water just right! Because, Martha, we were running away to be married. Married in Genoa at dawn and all that sort of thing, and we were to come back and face the Grand Duke Nicholas in his villa at Nice and say, 'To and behold, sire! If there's ever another throne in Russia, here's a new princess to hang on it!' That's what happened last night, Martha, because Michael had the urge."

Martha's eyes widened and she stared at the bare form splashing in the pool. "But, mademoiselle!" she protested; "it didn't really happen, did it?"

"Don't be silly, Martha. One has to have a passport to cross the frontier from France into Italy, and one just can't smile one's way past these iron-minded old fogies that stand on guard. Michael forgot all about that, he was so filled with me, and of course I didn't remind him of it. I had all the romantic thrill of a dash to become a bride, knowing I wouldn't have to be a bride at all. Now you may dry me, Martha, but don't rub too hard. I could hardly keep from laughing when Michael lost his argument with the frontier guard and realized he wasn't having any nuptials in the morning."

Martha should have said, merely, "Yes, mademoiselle!" with a maid servant's reticence, but somehow her mistress was never dignified during that morning bath. So she did not refrain from a prompting, "I should fancy so, mademoiselle." And her mistress gratified her.

He turned on me very fierce and solemn and just thundered at me: "You knew we didn't have our passports. Why didn't you remind me?" He must have seen my lips getting crooked because he said, then: "Joanna Manners, you're a fraud! But I'm not a fraud, as I'm Martha!"

"No, indeed, mademoiselle!" Martha replied, but even her mistress detected more of hope than conviction in her tone. For one brief instant, while the faithful maid held the thin yellow robe, the slender little body was enfolded in her arms. The warmth and pulses of it went straight to her heart and she wished that she could be sure that the girl she had served through a hectic, galloping year, was not—a fraud!

The events of that tempestuous year had reached flamboyant climaxes; the distraught, mystified mistress Martha had sent down the stairs to her first triumph in Yvonne's house off the avenue had become the Golden Girl around whom a vortex raged, a glittering, luring feather of paradise in a world of money and madness. And down in the secret recesses of Martha's soul there was a fear that she wished wasn't there. Perhaps this fear would have gleamed a little comfort or, perhaps, it might have been stirred anew, if she could have seen a hard, unpleasant shadow that passed swiftly across brown eyes when her mistress caught the note of prayer in her maid's assurance that she was not what the disappointed Prince Michael had dubbed her. But the shadow had gone completely when Joanna was propped again in her mountain of pillows. The sweetness was still in the voice when it commanded: "Now you may bring me some tea."

For a moment the maid hesitated, then announced: "Lord Dorminster has been waiting, mademoiselle, for much more than an hour. He is in your sitting room."

Joanna was all resentment immediately. "Why didn't you send him away. What in the world does he mean by sitting on my doorstep, I mean sitting in my sitting room, at this hour of the day?"

"He assured me that Mademoiselle had told him he might come for her at nine. He is in riding clothes."

"Well, I shan't pile out now for anybody. Put something around me that I won't show through and bring him in. I won't even give him any tea, but I'll make him hold my tray."

Martha spread a hasty glance around the room—a room that was all gold and pink, a spacious setting for the great golden bed, with its ceiling of limpid mirrors. There were countless feminine things about, lovely and expensive, Joanna saw Martha's roving glance and laughed at her. "Oh I shall keep his eyes engaged; don't fear, Martha. He is much too experienced to examine the corners of a young lady's chamber. Or to show it, at any rate."

When young Lord Dorminster appeared at the bedside Joanna ignored the cloud that hinted his dissatisfactions with his long solitude in the boudoir sitting room, and frowned up at him without so much as giving him her fingers.

"What a terrible man you are," she accused him, "to begin on me so early in the morning. Invent me some good reason at once or go away."

"But you told me, last night, that I might come. At none, we agreed. You promised to ride to San Remo. It's a gorgeous morning, too."

Joanna considered him judiciously. "Do you know," she said, "you are the most beastly thing I could imagine! You have the most disagreeable habit of reminding me in the morning of what foolish things she says at night. That's not fair, Teddy. Things are so different in the morning—"

"Surely you don't expect me to forget all those things you said to me last night so soon as this morning?" he demanded, incredulous.

"Of course," she assured him. "I have, anyway. What did I say last night, Teddy? Here sit down. You mustn't stand over my bed like that! Hold my toast. If you're good you can feed me a bite now and then. What did I say last night, Teddy?"

"You said that you were really becoming fond of me and that after a little while you'd talk seriously with me—about our future, you know."

"I really said that? Give me a bite of toast and let me think how to explain such a distraction."

He was gloomily silent while she disposed of a tiny nibble of her toast. His moroseness was so amusing she had to laugh at him, and she reached a finger to his lips, careless of the dropping away from her arm of the robe Martha had wrapped about her. "There now!" she said, "I remember. I had just had a glass of burgundy with Roddy Kenilworth. When he wants me to be very generous Roddy always inveigles me up to a sip of burgundy; I detest Roddy for that, but I did promise, Teddy, it delighted him so, that I gave it to you too. If a promise is good one should repeat it, don't you see?"

"No, I don't see," he declared, still morose. "But Roddy's out of it because I'm on deck and he isn't. But it's the other thing you told me that I hope you haven't forgot."

"You mean about my getting fond of you? That doesn't require an immediate making good, does it, Teddy? All right then, we won't forget that. I'm terribly fond of you and maybe I'll marry you, who knows?"

She considered him a minute and added: "I'm glad you are holding my toast, Teddy. You take everything I say so seriously. Now then, get out of here. I'm going to be dressed, and, evidently since Roddy hasn't remembered this morning any better than I do, I shall have Martha bring me my riding togs."

Gossip.

The dressing of Joanna Manners, each morning, when that young person condescended to put herself in the hands of her maids, was an important ceremony. It was not a matter for Martha alone. Martha had never ceased to be the ever-dependable, ever-patient, personal servant. Capable fingers were required for the toiled rituals of one who was now a regnant beauty.

Even riding togs needed Celeste and Marie. Celeste knew every wave and curl and vagrancy of the shimmering brown hair, and the precise point at which the red lips must arch and retreat. Marie was an encyclopedia of what went with what, and when the ensemble was worthy of its details. Between the precisions of both of them their mistress found ample time, each morning, to scan her daily portion of mail.

Amusements

The Atlanta Theater.

Whatever a smart musical comedy could be is exemplified in "Lady Be Good," which has been playing to capacity audiences at the Atlanta theater during the current week. It is a comedy of a book far above the usual musical comedy average, and has a comedian whose pace is so swift that he can put anything over in three performances. The comedy is the gem of the Atlanta theater, tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30 and Saturday matinee at 2:30.

Coming to the Atlanta.

"My Girl," the biggest musical comedy hit of the past year in New York, will be the attraction at the Atlanta theater throughout the coming week with matinees Wednesday, Thursday (Thanksgiving) and Saturday. "My Girl" will be presented here. The critics in New York unanimously proclaimed it one of the best of the ordinary musical attractions, containing not only a musical score of supreme melody, but a book and a story filled with brilliant dialogue and bright and snappy lyrics. Seats are now on sale.

Loew's Grand.

Loew's Grand this week is offering an unusually pleasing vaudeville bill which is headed by Julia Rooney, daughter of the late Pat Rooney in a series of dances in which she is assisted by Walter Clinton and the Lights Club orchestra. Miss Rooney gives imitations of dances of her own. The original dances of her own. The work of the orchestra led by Mr. Clinton also is excellent. Other acts on the bill are Captain H. C. McIntire, world's greatest rifle shot, Orren and Drew, singers and comedians; Herbert Faye and company, in "Laughology," and Jennings and Mack in a comedy sketch.

Keith's Forsyth.

Just thought transmission—a new kind of psychic power—is the wonderful and entirely entertaining feature of George Lovett and company, assisted by Georgia Templeton who appear as the headlining feature on the program at Keith's Forsyth the last part of this week. Also the program includes the act of Harry Rose who calls himself "The Broadway Jester." Grosz and Casey in "The Shrieking Violet" and Ergotti and Herman in their skit entitled, "I Like It," are highly entertaining. Three Cheers is a comedy, song and dance number.

Howard Theater.

It is doubtful if Pola Negri ever appeared in a more attractive role than in which she portrays in "Flower of Night," which is the feature picture at the Howard theater this week. It is an unusually strong part and the star plays it with her accustomed cleverness. The supporting cast is brilliantly effective. Another feature is "Remember When," a clever Mack Sennett comedy with Harry Langdon. Dorothy South, who was prima donna with "The Greenwich Village Follies," and Milton Monroe, Chicago baritone, makes a hit with "Cristoforo Colombo." The "Spanish Fan," a decided novelty is presented by three graceful dancers. It was staged by Lekky J. Prince. Jan Rubini, plays two violin numbers.

The Rialto.

Although it provides the basis for most of America's most popular—and most shrewd—news, the American family conceals within itself many tragedies, sorrows, heartaches and drama. A graphic portrait of a typical New England family, iron-clad in tradition, steeped in Puritanism, and ruled by a dominant, ruthless, cruel old woman, is drawn in "Siege," starring Virginia Hall and Eugene O'Brien, which is being shown at the Pathe news and a musical program by William Whitney Hobbs.

Alpha Theater.

A tradition to surpass in magnitude any attraction ever made with relation to sea adventure, Frank Lloyd's "The Sea Hawk" is scheduled for presentation at the Alpha theater commencing this week. "The Sea Hawk" by the author of the well remembered "Scaramouche" is said to possess even more brilliant dramatic incidents, and to have required even a more pretentious setting than that memorable epic.

The Metropolitan.

A song writer and composer of national fame, Benny Davis and his beautiful and accomplished bride for a few days past over a real big hit. Not in many days, if ever, has an act of this quality been seen on an Atlanta stage. At the Metropolitan the Davis pair are assisted by another young song writer, J. J. Greer, at the piano. The picture! Well now, it's Rudolph Valentino's latest, "The Eagle" he is supported by that new, beautiful blonde beauty, Vilma Banky. Valentino's new role is that of a young Russian officer. Leide and his Metropolitan orchestra, news and views complete the program.

SPANISH VETERANS WILL ENTERTAIN CONFEDERATES

Confederate veterans of the city and those quartered at the Old Soldiers home, attended by their sponsors, will be entertained at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon by members of Theodore Roosevelt Camp No. 6 and Theodore Roosevelt Auxiliary No. 2, United Spanish War Veterans, at the hall in the Wigwam, 86 Central avenue. Speakers will address the veterans, the Vaughan quartet will sing, and a band will play. Refreshments will be served.

ASK HOOVER HERE FOR RADIO SPEECH

Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, has been urged in telegrams sent him by Mayor Sims and other prominent Atlantans to attend Atlanta's first radio broadcast, which is in the city auditorium the week beginning December 7. It is the desire of sponsors of the exposition that Mr. Hoover address Atlantans on the future of radio broadcasting in the United States.

HOLD UP CONCERN ABOUT ENTERING RACE

Frank A. Holden, prominent young Athens attorney recently associated with a well-known Florida really concern, was in Atlanta this week after attending the Georgia-Tech football game on his way from Palm Beach to Athens. He is a graduate of the University of Georgia and played college football for the Georgia basketball team four years. He takes a keen interest in athletics, especially when the university is playing.

Holden, a member of the legislature of 1923-1924 from Clarke county. In his race for congress last year from the eighth district, out of a total vote of 22,000, the race was so close that a change of less than 250 votes would have elected him.

Asked if he expected to make the race for congress next year, he said he believed he could win if he were to run, but he now had business opportunities that he would not want to give them up. While he did not state positively that he would not run, he said that the question as to whether he would run is now one of considerable doubt.

Mr. Holden is located at Palm Beach as special attorney for the "Development Corporation" which is building a city at Boca Raton, Fla., between Palm Beach and Miami. He said that he and others connected with this corporation were now forming another company to deal in Florida real estate, bonds and mortgages. Mr. Holden said that he does not believe that he would leave his home, but would return to Georgia before great while. He expressed belief that Georgia would soon be enjoying great prosperity.

West End Christians Plan To Celebrate Church Anniversary

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the West End Christian church will be celebrated at 7:45 o'clock Friday night when C. R. Stauffer, pastor of First Christian church, will bring a message of congratulation upon the erection of a three-story Bible school building, modern in design and church officials' statement.

Gathering Strength

While it might appear to some that the real estate market is dull, yet we believe that Atlanta is gathering strength every day for a future going up, the most substantial kind of a growth that a city can enjoy. Notice the new Athletic Club building, a handsome structure, finer than any other building of its kind in the southern states.

Nearly in the new Macy store, the first of modern department stores to invade the north side. On Cone street in the same general locality an auto hotel is going up. This is a new building brought about by the demand for storing automobiles.

A real solid, substantial growth characterizes the building operations in Atlanta. Apartment houses of the better type have been erected; in the future all apartment houses and buildings which shelter a large number of families should be fireproof. The growth of Atlanta is of a substantial and permanent type, laying the foundations of a firm real estate market.

"To Be or Not To Be"
While crossing a crowded street one day Mr. Yowater Waste-Time and the twins had a heated argument as to which car they would allow to kill them.

In the paper that evening Mr. Waste-Time noticed that the authorities had started a relentless war against reckless driving.

As an enthusiastic Atlanta citizen he hopes that next year wholesale killing of the populace is a sport in which we will lose the national championship which we now hold.

Why Risk It?

when coal's so easy to get!

Going short of coal is poor judgment in November. So it is also in February, December, March and January.

Before the coal-scoop scrapes the bottom of the bin, pick up your phone and order plenty of Acton or Dixie—and get it off your mind.

You can't really feel at ease until you do get enough coal in to see you through the coldest snap. And she's a-comin'—soon!
